Air Power Without Rival

Appointment of Gen. Carl A. Spaatz to direct the aerial demolition of Japan with forces under the command of Lt. Gen. James Doolittle and Maj. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay is vastly more than a routine shift of gold braids.

These three men, their assistants and the highly trained personnel they direct are the quintessence of modern air power. The elaborate and expensive machinery they employ is only a detail. It is conceivable that better airplanes might be built than even the best of the American models, but the Germans, the Japanese and to some extent the British and Russians, now acknowledge that no one is likely to find better men to fly them and take care of them. The United States, because of a combination of men, material and skill, has no rival in air power.

As the combination goes to work intensively on Japan, doubling and redoubling efforts which already have destroyed the heart of Japanese urban organization, there can be no well informed Japanese in doubt of the outcome. The demolition of Japan by air power is not an experiment, as it was in Germany. It is a demonstration; the experiment was proved at Germany's expense.

Gen. LeMay's 20th Air Force alone has been enough to change the course of the Japanese war. But its heaviest raids now are to be multiplied several times by the addition of Gen. Doolittle's Eighth Air Force and by the services of Gen. Spaatz as master strategist. For Japan the announcement will not bear much less discouragement than the long-awaited announcement that the invasion of the home islands has begun.

Mistakes Of The Head

The great outpouring of sympathy for the Chinese that will be loosed by the eighth anniversary of their one-sided struggle against Japanese invasion will not add anything to their ability to survive until the ninth anniversary next year.

The Chinese must have wished often for a little less sympathy and a lot more high explosives, less friendly advice from their American friends and more groceries. But, despite the shortcomings in the relationship, something exceedingly fine has happened.

Without knowing how China's political problems are going to be solved, and without having any clear ideas about establishing its military security, most Americans are convinced the Chinese are about to go from bad to better. That means in a thousand ways there will be American assistance forthcoming, because that is the way Americans do things. When Americans thought the Japanese were deserving of their interest—and their help—they brought that formerly primitive people abreast of the machine age in a few generations. Unfortunately, the consequences of the Japanese clung to their barbarism were ignored. For better or for worse, the same interest now is being shown in China.

Again, Americans may make mistakes of the head, but we never make mistakes of the heart. We always mean well, even in our worst blunders.

Broad Principles Don't Count

Approval of the "broad principle" of universal military training in peacetime by the House post-war military policy committee is no triumph for friends of the youth draft. Everybody is for the broad principle of training to meet the military emergencies. The issue is over details. These have not been specified by the military men whose opinion is supposed to carry the most weight. They have not explained how they believe military training should be organized, or how they think it should be administered. They have not made a case for anything so far. On the contrary, they may have done a disservice to national preparedness by making it appear that is consists only of compulsory peacetime training. Actually, that is one of the least of the essentials of preparedness. France had peacetime conscription and a great deal besides, yet neither France nor Germany was prepared for the thing it tried to do.

Slow But Sure Justice

Statements in highly authoritative quarters that mass trials of top Nazi war criminals should be started by late summer and finished by next December should satisfy those—meaning almost everyone—who are eager that justice in these cases shall be sure, swift and stern.

Considering the importance of the cases, the number of defendants to be tried, the magnitude of the job of preparation and the involved international aspects of the entire proceedings, such a schedule will represent astonishing judicial speed.

Naturally, many may feel that even the schedule outlined is overly long. Their thought that the criminals should be given the formality of a trial and then shot has its appealing features. But that would be the Nazi way of handling this matter—which is about the best possible argument for not doing it that way.

The better way, and the democratic way, is to take a little longer and handle the cases as they are being handled. This will tend to add emphasis to the fact that, in the larger sense, democracy is synonymous with the guarantee of justice for all.

Some Surprised Parties

Walter Lippmann, arguing that the United States, Russia, Great Britain and China must agree on the grand strategy for defeating Japan, says nationalist Chungking and communist Yenan, symbols of political conflict inside China, must settle their differences first. The United States, he contends, must put pressure on Chungking to this effect, and Russia must put pressure on Yenan.

"An effort by Chungking to settle its differences with Yenan by military force," declares Mr. Lippmann, "would bring Chiang Kai-shek's armies face to face with the Red Army."

There are going to be some surprised parties when this particular bit of column-writing hits Moscow, Yenan and Chungking, because at last official reports the communist movement in China was homegrown, receiving no aid from Russia, and Chungking, suspecting the contrary, had no intention of being talked out of its suspicions. Mr. Lippmann's proposal for Chungking to do an about-face on America's order while Yenan yields to Russian persuasion, a la Poland, is going to raise a lot of questions—and a few eyebrows.

The Stars Say

For Sunday, July 8

Sunday's horoscope holds augury of rather pleasant and lively activities in private, social, domestic and business relations, in which the romantic and youthful vocations and avocations are predominant. Nonetheless there is a menace of deep-laid and tricky undercurrents, which might come into the open to discomfort and distress. Being alert to all subtle, illicit or irregular plots and intrigue may be desirable for lasting benefits and happiness.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a promising year in which there may be changes, travel, new agreements, as well as pleasant domestic, romantic and social activities. But an undercurrent of treachery, duplicity and subtle intrigues makes it advisable to be alert to all manner of traps, plots and snares. As well, it may be wise to surmount personal confusion, delusions, chaos or strange emotional impulses or ideas.

A child born on this day should be moderately clever, versatile, active and ambitious, but it may be subject to its own emotional urges or to machinations of treacherous persons.

For Monday, July 9

Monday's astrological forecast is for a definite grasp of fresh opportunities, for progress in which enterprise and initiative attract support from influential personages. This may be in work, new business or industrial projects of a concrete form in which real ambitions are advanced. There may be obstacles to be surmounted by practical and strenuous effort, with profitable and pleasant climax.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year of lucrative and pleasant developments in their affairs, business and private, with all things flourishing as reward for work well done. There may be fresh starts, following the removal of tenacious obstacles or static conditions. Practical and aggressive action should attract support from influential persons ready to cooperate in your new project of worth. Very pleasant social or domestic relations are also indicated.

A child born on this day will be enterprising, skillful and have much constructive ability, attracting support from those in influential places. It should have a happy and productive life.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Looking Inside the Lungs

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

IT'S an easy matter to take a look at the inside of the air passages in the lungs now, just to see what is going on in there. This is done by means of the bronchoscope which is an instrument made up of a tube with lights. These air passages are called bronchi. This instrument was devised originally to get rid of objects which may have been breathed into the lungs. Now the bronchoscope is extensively used in diagnosing and treating a number of lung disorders.

The bronchoscope has been found most useful in aiding in the diagnosis and treatment of bronchial obstruction, that is, blocking of the bronchi from one cause or another.

Air Passages Blocked

When a person suffers from wheezing, it often is a sign of partial blocking of these air passages or bronchi. This wheezing may be due to a number of causes; for example, to some object which has been breathed into the air passages, to tumor growth, to a narrowing of the bronchial tubes due to cell tissue formation, to blocking by lumps of secretion or pressure on the bronchi due to enlarged lymph glands, or to a tumor in the middle area of the chest known as a mediastinal tumor.

Of course, a frequent cause of wheezing is asthma, in which there is a spasm of the muscles in the bronchi which narrows the opening through them. As a general rule, it is easy to make a diagnosis of asthma. However, the other disorders cannot be detected so simply. An examination with a bronchoscope will make diagnosis possible.

Cough is a common symptom which usually can be explained by easily demonstrated diseases of the lungs, but in some instances, especially those wherein the cough keeps up regardless of treatment, the cause of the cough cannot be so easily detected. The cough is often a sign of irritation of the bronchi, but the cause of the irritation often can be determined only by means of a bronchoscopic examination.

Some of the more important causes of irritation of the tubes of bronchi are cancer of the lungs and infections. In cancer, the cough usually starts at night and cannot be controlled with medicines. The growth at first may be too small to cause wheezy breathing, but the cancer often can be discovered in its early stages by means of a bronchoscopic study.

Coughing Blood

The coughing up of blood formerly was considered to be an almost certain sign of tuberculosis of the lungs. But now it is known to be a common symptom of the disorder called bronchiectasis, or a tumor growth of the bronchi. In bron-chiectasis, the bronchi are dilated or enlarged.

When bleeding from the air passages occurs, and X-ray or physical examination does not show the cause, the bronchoscope investigation should be carried out. This examination should not be made during or immediately following a large hemorrhage.

Bear in mind that examination with the bronchoscope is not a difficult procedure to carry out by a trained expert and it often may be a life-saving measure.

WE FLEW Without GUNS

XIV
When I returned to duty at Dinjan two new boys were assigned to my plane. A co-pilot named [unclear] and a radio operator named [unclear]. They were smart boys, both of them. But on our third trip to [unclear] I had one of the worst experiences of my flying career with Hung.

We were coming back from [unclear] with a load of tin and the overcast was soup-thick all the way up to 24,000 feet. The way up to 24,000 feet was an experience with special super-charged engines, designed to per-charged altitude than the DC-3 and C-47s whose ceiling was 24,300 feet.

At 25,000 feet we came out above the overcast. The temperature at that altitude was far below zero. The heater in the plane wasn't working very well, and an added disadvantage was that we had been using our oxygen almost constantly since leaving Kunming four hours before.

We were over the most dangerous part of the hills, about an hour out of Dinjan with known peaks rising as high as 24,000 feet. When this boy Hung suddenly held up, "Boohoo! Boohoo!" In Chinese that meant "No good!" I looked around to see what was wrong. Hung immediately grabbed the controls and shot the plane down in a steep dive into the overcast. With a load of tin you just don't do things like that for fear of shifting the cargo, and anyway I couldn't see anything wrong. I reached out, knocking his hands from the controls, righted the ship and started to climb up again.

Everything was all right for about five minutes. Twice I asked Hung at the helm he was trying to do, but he didn't answer. He continued to stare directly ahead and kept his hands clenched in his lap. The overcast was climbing higher by then, we were going right into it, and I was busy with the instruments, checking our position against the known peaks in the vicinity. And when you're under oxygen for a long stretch, you doublecheck those things because it's easy to get careless—woozzy—the stuff is so much like a drug.

Without warning this time Hung grabbed the controls again. He really had a death grip on them, and he was heading us straight down into almost certain death. I had no alternative. I reached for, pulled off his oxygen mask with my right hand, loosened my safety belt and came around in a roundhouse with my left, catching him squarely on the jaw. His head bobbed over on his shoulder, his hands relaxed on the controls, and he pulled out of the dive. I don't know how close we came to disaster because I couldn't see a hundred feet ahead of me. According to my charts we should have hit a 23,000 foot peak at that point, and I'm sure we must have missed it by only a few seconds. In any event, I released the oxygen mask on Hung's limp face and we got back to 25,000 feet and made the crossing without further trouble.

We were down to about 7000 feet and within sight of Dinjan when Hung slowly roused himself and began to feel his chin.

"What the hell happened to you?" I demanded. I still felt I hadn't settled my score with him.

Hung looked at me, startled.

"Nothing, Captain," he said. "I—I'm all right."

"What was our highest altitude?" I asked him.

"Eighteen thousand, sir," he replied instantly.

"You don't remember going above 18,000?" I asked.

"No, sir. We haven't been above 18,000," Hung said.

"What are you rubbing your jaw for?"

"It's sore. I must have bumped it. I don't remember.... I don't know when...."

Hung was too good a boy to do what he had done unless he was out of his head, and by the time we landed I could make a pretty good guess as to the cause of his conduct. To some extent it was typical of the Chinese, even the smart ones like Hung. Little details irritate them; they aren't naturally scientific in their thinking or in their conduct; and if they can't see the immediate value of a procedure or a policy they are likely to figure it is unimportant. That may not be true of all Chinese, but it is definitely true of the ones I have known. It was true of Hung.

"Let's see your mask," I said to him as soon as we stepped out of the plane at Dinjan.

He handed it to me and I tilted it. A good half-ounce of water ran out into my hand. I shook the water from my palm and handed the mask back to him.

"If that ever happens again, Hung," I said, "I'm going to report you."

The most dangerous mistake a person can make who is depending on an oxygen mask is to let the condensed moisture from his breath remain in the mask after using it. The orders are specific in that regard: you drain your mask and dry it every time you use it. Hung had failed to do so, and in the intense cold above 18,000 feet a little clot of ice had formed in the tube, almost completely blocking off his oxygen supply. Most people would have fainted under such circumstances. Hung had gone batty instead.

Navy Renews Appeal For Girls to Become WAVES

The steadily growing casualty lists—bringing the impact of the Pacific war solidly into American homes—brought a new appeal from the Navy today for more WAVES.

Critically needed, the Navy said, are women for the Hospital Corps. They are needed to work as technicians in clinical, x-ray, physical therapy, occupational therapy, dental and pharmacy laboratories. In the business end of the Navy, thousands of women are needed to work as control tower operators, photographers, communications operators, link trainer instructors, clerks, typists, storekeepers, secretaries, and many other jobs at shore installations in the United States and overseas.

Application may be made at the Navy recruiting station, room 322 postoffice building, Youngstown.

Questions and Answers On Problems of the Servicemen

WASHINGTON—Here are some general questions from GIs and veterans of World War II:

Q. My nephew was discharged from the Army because of injury to his eyes which resulted from an explosion. As Army doctors feared, he is going blind. What are the provisions for furnishing a seeing-eye dog to blind veterans?

A. Veterans blinded as a result of service are entitled to seeing-eye dogs, including travel expenses to and from their homes and expenses incurred in becoming adjusted to such dogs, as well as necessary mechanical and electronic equipment for aiding them in overcoming the handicap of blindness.

Q. My son was killed in Italy last winter and buried in a cemetery there. My neighbor tells me there has been a law passed which provides for bringing his body back to this country for burial if I request it. Is that true?

A. That law has not been passed. If the Government follows the same procedure as it did after World War I, however, the remains of your son will be returned to the U. S. at your request. This, of course, will be later, when transportation is available.

Q. The nearest office of Veterans Administration is several hundred miles away from where I live. Where would you suggest is the next best place to get advice about veterans' matters? I have many of my own and am trying to help advise several other vets in my community.

A. Your local draft board will probably answer most of your questions and refer you to the proper authority, or the local office of the United States Employment Service usually has a veteran expert to give advice on such matters. You will probably find one of these two offices closer to your home.

Keep Cool In Midsummer Black

NEW YORK — What makes that old black magic—the dress which casts its spell over summer—look new this year is added color, which unfurls at necklines, encircles waists, points up boleros, accents the pert flare of peplums.

Far from being limited to one set of frills, most black and navy blue dresses still cling to their vaunted wardrobe virtue—basic use—and stand ready to be stripped down for background wear. If, like many of the forefeminid women, your choice of a dark dress is determined by all-year-round wearability, you'll find as many opaque crepes—both light and heavyweights—and rayon spuns, which skip seasonal boundaries, as you will the more summery sheer crepes, organzas and other shadowweavers.

Of the colors marched out to relieve the somber look of dark dresses, spun-sugar pink is tops. It springs up in ruffles from deep-V necklines, appears and disappears from the inside of sashes, and weaves a garland of posies which, for example, makes dramatic highlights for dressy black crepes, such as you see at right in the Stein-Blaine model. Out of print come the appliqued borders of pink roses and leafy foliage which make a fake bolero look like the McCoy and outline the pert flare of a real peplum.

Belts provide color that highlights many dark dresses; color that can be buckled on or taken off at will, as, for instance, the saddle-stitched luggage-leather holster belt, shown center, which dramatizes a dark spun rayon dress that Troy Stix designed with dolman-style sleeve and uncluttered neckline to keep its wearer cool.

For dressy wear when you want to look as cool as a late-afternoon shadow many dark sheers oblige and will also accommodate the party-girl junior miss. Proving this is the Hollywood studio designed organza dress, highlighted by a berth collar of stirred pink organza, worn at left by Shirley Temple.

which is typical of many of the fetching styles her contemporaries will be wearing.

How long will it take to beat JAPAN?

*One Year? Three Years? Five Years? Look at these Facts...
From the Army and Navy. Then Figure it Out for Yourself!*

In spite of Midway, Bougainville, Tarawa, Saipan, Leyte, Manila, Iwo Jima, Okinawa, and all the other American victories, Japan now controls an area and population far larger than the United States, and with many natural resources greater than ours.

Her home islands are industrialized and organized to the last rivet, the last kilowatt of power, the last pair of human hands.

Japan can put in the field over 4,000,000 well-trained, battle-hardened troops, many with ten years of war behind them. This force is twice as large as all the German armies which defended France, the low countries and the Western front of the Reich against the combined armies of the United States, Britain, Canada and the Free French.

Back of these soldiers are more than 70 million civilians on the Jap home front, firmly indoctrinated in emperor worship—every man, woman and child ready and eager to die for the man they believe is a god.

Japan is fighting on "interior" lines. It's true that its fleet is now much smaller than ours. But never forget that the U. S. Navy has a much bigger job to do.

The Japs have stated, and no thinking man or woman doubts it, that they are prepared to sacrifice 10,000,000 men to hold their empire. To the Japanese, life is cheap. The emperor and the state mean everything—the individual, nothing.

If the war were to end tomorrow, Japan would have put the seal on a conquest greater than Napoleon's.

"But," you say, "the war with Japan won't end tomorrow."

Well, what about it? Will it end "tomorrow," or next month or next year, for you?

Are you planning to quit your war job, stop your blood donations, slacken your bond buying, use black market gas, have more fun, ease up generally?

Before you do, remember that many a gallant American boy, now vibrant with the breath of life, will die at the hands of the Japs.

How many?

Thousands? Certainly. Hundreds of thousands? Probably.

Well, how many?

That's up to you.

How you can help

- 1 Keep that war job!
- 2 Keep buying Bonds!
- 3 Keep doing all your country asks!

Recreation Remains At Top With 13-3 Victory Over China

Batter "Batty" Morrison Hard For 12 Hits As Rain Halts Mullins-Leetonia Try

For the second time in two games this season the Recreation, hopeful contenders for the second round title, defeated the Salem China. This time, in the game at the Centennial park diamond last night, they did it impressively, 13-3.

Leetonia and Mullins struggled hard to get their game off the books but Old Man Weather determined it was "no game" and that's the way it ended after an inning and a half. With Batty Morrison tossing in the mound offerings for the Pottery, the Reds had a big night at the plate, crashing out 12 solid hits. Coupled with five China errors and seven walks issued by Morrison, the Old Timers had an easy night of it.

Outstanding for the winners yesterday was Martin "Peanuts" Debnar, back in the league after several years absence. Debnar smacked out three hits, scored three times and walked once in four trips to the plate. He also came through with a beautiful catch while going full steam in left center. The grab robbed Don Kopf, Potter catcher, of a sure home run.

Again on hitting trail was Veteran Shorty Borton last night. He hit three of five for safeties and scored a run, besides playing a top-notch game at second base.

Ehrhart Shines
Manager John Ehrhart of the China paced his squad at the plate, laying out a single to right field and beating out an infield hit for two good ones in three trips to the platter.

Gregg walked one Potter and fanned another while Morrison fanned one and walked seven.

The Rec scored four in the second, one more in the third, an additional pair in the fourth and finished it off with four in the fifth and two in the sixth. The China scored all three runs in the second inning, after which it looked like it might be a ball game.

The victory puts Recreation at the top of the league along with Mullins, Sinclair and Demings.

IT'S

As Holmes Set New National Batting Mark

Banging out a double in the first inning of the second game of double-header with Pittsburgh Pirates, Tommy Holmes, Boston Braves outfielder, breaks the 23-year-old National League record for hitting safely in consecutive games. Holmes is shown just after he connected to stretch his streak to 34 games in a row, one more than the previous record. (International photo.)

HOLMES' HITTING MERELY LUCK, HE TELLS TEAMMATES

Has Clubbed Out Hits In 34 Straight Contests For New Record

(By Associated Press)
BOSTON, July 7.—While his admiring Boston Braves teammates replayed the five of the 71 games he has been held hitless, modest Tommy Holmes today tried to explain away his 34-straight streak, a new National League modern slugging record, on grounds that he is lucky.

After Holmes erased Rogers Hornsby's 23-year-old 33-game mark yesterday by hitting a homer, four doubles and a single in 10 turns at bat during a doubleheader with the Pittsburgh Pirates, his teammates went over all of their 1945 box scores.

"If it wasn't for those circus catches in Chicago, you'd have hit in 48 straight games and made everybody forget about the 44-game record Willie Keeler hit back in 1897," a Tribesman complained. "And look at those six pitchers who stopped you. They tried to pass you every time you came to the plate."

Says He's Lucky
"Not that Claude Passeau," Holmes protested in favor of the last rival pitcher to blank him, back on June 3 in Chicago. "When I do manage to connect against his stuff, I always feel that I've been hitting a ping pong ball."

Since June 6, when Brooklyn-born Tommy started his record-smashing drive, he has put together 63 hits in 144 tries for a .438 average. Back in 1941, when American league Joe DiMaggio set his all-time mark by hitting in 56 straight games, that Yankee slugger did it with a .403 batting pace.

BELL WHIPPED IN GARDEN OPENING

Drops Decision to Lamotta After Making Rally In Final Round

By JACK MEIER
NEW YORK, July 7.—Tommy Bell, the Youngstown welterweight, who has been burning up the hinterland, got licked in his first Madison Square Garden fight last night, but he made such a good showing that Promoter Mike Jacobs undoubtedly will find another Garden spot for him soon.

Jake Lamotta of the Bronx, sporting a 12-pound weight advantage at 161 to 149, was the man who spoiled Bell's New York debut. Whomping away at Bell's body with his usual hard stomach blows, Jake won an unanimous 10-round decision before 8,708 who paid $24.15.

Bell got a bloody nose from a Lamotta left in the third and was nearly felled in the fifth and sixth, but he stood up to this hammering and put on a whirlwind fight in the last round that almost sent Jake to the canvas for the first time in his ring career.

Difference In Voting
At the end, Judge Charles Rosen voted eight rounds for Lamotta and two for Bell. Judge Joe Angelo saw it as 7-3 and Referee Ruby Goldstein, as well as the Associated Press, call it 6-4.

Bell clipped Lamotta with his best punch, a short, sharp right to the chin, in the first minute of the scrap, but the Gibraltar-like Jake shook it off. Bell landed the same punch on many other occasions, but he might as well have been hitting a rock.

Bell's next fight is against Jimmy Doyle in Cleveland on July 19.

Well-Known Canton Merchants, Beaten But Twice In 15 Games, At Park Sunday

Salem baseball fans will have another treat in store for them again tomorrow when the Canton Merchants, a top-notch district Negro outfit, will clash with the Salem A. C. on the Centennial park diamond at 3 p. m.

Reputed to be one of the best in this part of Ohio, the Merchants are well known throughout this section. Leading their league in Canton, they have only dropped two games so far this year in some 15 tries. The Warren Negro Giants, one of their opponents, fell before the Merchant onslaught last week.

The game is the second in a series of two month's home games booked for Centennial park. Sponsor Scott Chisholm said.

'46 FORD ROLLS OFF ASSEMBLY LINE

WITH MOTOR COMPANY OFFICIALS as passengers, Henry Ford, 2nd, drives the first new 1946 Ford automobile off the assembly line at Detroit, Mich. The new car is not a "stop gap," company officials pointed out, but the result of four years of research. If you're non-prioritary, you'll have to wait a year before you can buy one. The new car is said to have many improvements over the pre-war model.

Brooklyn's Lead Sliced To Single Game As Bruins, Cardinals Creep Forward

Associated Press Sports Writer
It's a fine how-do-you-do in Flatbush with the Dodgers losing 15-3 and a Brooklyn-born laddie setting new records in Boston.

Tommy Holmes was brought up almost in the shadow of Ebbetts field but he has done his ball playing from the Yankee farm system and the Boston Braves, where he hit safely in his 33rd and 34th games yesterday to smash Roger Hornsby's old standard, set in 1922.

Although Holmes still is 22 short of Joe DiMaggio's mark of 56 set in 1941, his feat of hitting safely in 34 successive contests, at a .438 pace, lifting his season mark to .407 and leading four individual departments and tied for a fifth is by far the standout individual job of the campaign.

It must have been the Holmes inspiration that pulled the Braves out of a losing slump that began with a 24-2 pasting by Chicago, for Boston twice whipped Pittsburgh 13-5 and 14-8.

Chicago and St. Louis continued to make the big noise in the National, the Cubs rambling over the Phillies twice 11-3 and 5-1 and the Cards thumping the Browns, 15-3. The composite result finds the Dodgers' lead sliced to a single game over the Bruins with the Red Birds only one and a half off the pace.

Cincinnati eased out the New York Giants, 3-2, behind Howard Fox to hand Van Mungo his fourth loss.

New York took a fall out of the first-place Detroit Tigers, 5-4, with Oscar Grimes doing most of the hitting and Floyd Bevens doing all of the pitching for his eighth success.

Washington opened up on St. Louis to sweep a doubleheader, 6-3 and 5-2, holding second place and moving to within three games of the Tigers. Rick Ferrell established

LISBON, July 7.—Sheriff George Hayes is investigating the case of Harold Greene, 34, who is being held in county jail on a charge of vagrancy after he was found lying in the Route 30, highway three miles west of Lisbon, Friday morning.

He told the sheriff he was tired and had lain down to rest.

He carried no draft registration card and told the sheriff he was from Franklin, Pa. Later he said he had been released from a state mental hospital at Woodburn, N.Y.

Union Files Charges
CANTON, July 7.—The CIO-United Electrical workers union has filed charges with the regional NLRB in Cleveland accusing the Tumken Roller Bearing Co. of violating the National Labor Relations act, Union President I. W. Abel reported last night.
Abel objected to a "company-issued employee's manual" and asserted the company had "interfered with, restrained and coerced" employees in the exercise of their rights under the NLRB and refused to bargain collectively with the union.

Bicycle Riders And Motorists Urged To Cooperate In Safety

The "cycle built for two" was a novel means of transportation in the days before automobiles became more numerous, according to A. P. Morris, manager of the Columbiana Motor club.

However, in these days, riding another person on a bicycle built to carry only one person safely, very often ends in a traffic accident—too often in a fatality.

Cyclists and motorists alike share a responsibility for the prevention of accidents. The cyclist is subject to the same rules as the driver of the car, but often he does not realize that fact, or chooses to ignore it. Truck riding, carrying passengers on handles or frames, and hitching rides are not only contrary to the law, but exceeding dangerous practice. Cyclists should obey the laws which apply to them as cyclists.
The motorists should be especially cautious when approaching bicycle riders. He should give sufficient warning of his presence, but at the same time avoid blasting his horn in such a manner as to frighten the boy or girl.

Correspondents Tell of Interesting Island War Happenings

By RALPH MORTON

HOLLANDIA, Dutch New Guinea—The story about Anastacio Ramoran, the Filipino who claimed Japanese mistreatment cured him of disabling stomach ulcers, was related here by Lt. Col. Carl C. E. Melberg, U. S. army chaplain.
Melberg, a Methodist minister of Springfield, N. J., serving as chaplain of the Far East Air Service command, said he believed Ramoran's strange experience was true.

Here is the story:
In the grim days of the Japanese invasion of the Philippines, an American plane was forced down on tiny Salpari island in Luzon's Lingayen Gulf. The pilot and mechanic were sheltered by the Filipinos until the Japanese came looking for them. Then the Americans escaped by boat and the Filipinos fled to the hills—all but Anastacio Ramoran.

"He was still in his bed," Melberg related, "when the frustrated Japs arrived demanding to know about the Americans. In a Christian manner, he courteously told them he did not know."
"For three years I have been bed-ridden," he said. "I know they were here, but I cannot tell you where they are. I do not know."

Drafted To Ocean
Melberg said the Japanese dragged the Filipino to the seashore and forced him to drink ocean water until he was near bursting. "Then," he continued, "they placed his almost lifeless body on the sand and began to march back and forth across his face and stomach."
"The sea water gushed forth from his mouth, nose and ears. Finally he was abandoned as dead and the Japanese patrol returned to the mainland."

The Filipinos returned from their hiding places, Melberg related, and carried Anastacio Ramoran back to his bed, more dead than alive.
"After three days," he added, "consciousness returned and eager hands nursed him back to life again."
Anastacio Ramoran, bedridden for three years, is now working his rice fields and has full use of his body. The ailment from which he suffered was cured. Due to the atrocity of the Japanese, the ulcers in his stomach burst and we can assume the sea water acted as an irrigating solution that cleaned the abdominal cavity."

LEAVES FROM A WAR CORRESPONDENT'S NOTEBOOK

By A. I. GOLDBERG (Subbing For Hal Boyle)

VIENNA—Here are some impressions of central Europe after a ten-day trip over an area of 15,000 square miles:
The only thing that approaches the Russian army singing on the march is a Scottish bagpipe band. But the rolling bass voices marking step for the Russian soldiers marching through a Bohemian village is a stirring experience. Women soldiers march and sing with their men.

The Nazi swastika still is worn by the Germans—but it's a badge of disgrace now. German enemies and collaborators arrested by the occupation troops in northern Czechoslovakia have been formed into labor battalions to help mend the roads and repair buildings. To distinguish them, each wears a swastika band.

The Russians in Bratislava have a loudspeaker system hitched up throughout the city, and news and music from the Bratislava and Moscow radios blare out at intervals, day and night. Then you walk around the corner in a twisting 14th century street and hear Bing Crosby's throaty singing clear as a bell.

Budapest girls are chic, trim, smart and beautiful. They wear wedgies. But don't get ideas—the clothes they are wearing may be the only garments they have in the world. Most of their clothes were lost in the scare when Budapest took to the cellars.

In a shop window, a pair of used men's oxfords are priced at $15 at current exchange rates. Children's used shoes cost $6. But Budapest shops display candy and cakes.

which are difficult to find in many parts of Europe.
This is great corn country and in the rolling valleys of Slovakia, Hungary and eastern Austria, the corn is high—above knee height by July 4. The greatest delicacy on sale in the area is popcorn, sold in paper bags. People walk along the streets munching popcorn—but without syrup on it, like at Coney Island or the midway of any county fair in Ohio or Oklahoma.

Every Russian army vehicle flies a red flag and no matter how decrepit or shabby the vehicle may be the bunting is always fresh and gay. Where American vehicle drivers have pinup girls, the Russian drivers pin up pictures of Stalin, Lenin or Molotov in the cab of trucks or on posters stuck to the car sides.

'Dauntless Dottie' In Crash; Ten Are Killed

SAIPAN, July 9.—"Dauntless Dottie," the Superfortress that led the first B-29 strike against Tokyo and for 53 missions carried without faltering the spirit of her name, has been lost in the Pacific, carrying to their deaths 10 of the 13 men aboard.

Like "Dauntless Dottie," those who lost their lives had completed their combat missions and were returning to the United States. One of those killed was Pfc. Lowell B. Spivey of Windsor, N. C., being turned to "non-hazardous duty" because his two brothers had been killed in action.
